

National Watershed Coalition Assistance to Watershed Project Sponsors

The National Watershed Coalition (NWC) maintains a tradition of providing assistance to watershed project sponsors. Assistance may be provided in person or by telephone and email. Other opportunities for assistance are found in information and education materials posted on the NWC website. The NWC also provides a number of regional and national workshops and training sessions.

The NWC membership is comprised of national, regional and local organizations and individuals that are involved in watershed projects. Our membership gives the coalition a wealth of expertise and project knowledge that can be shared. This network of staff and members can be mobilized to provide guidance, consultation and assistance in many areas. The coalition can:

- Conduct workshops and training sessions on subjects such as operation and maintenance and securing funding for watershed projects.
- Serve as a resource to put sponsors in contact with others who have completed new construction or rehabilitation projects; utilized new technologies; or found innovative ways to organize and use watershed data.
- Provide training and guidance to assist watershed boards in staying active and effective.
- Provide assistance in developing watershed information and education strategies.
- Provide examples and templates for fact sheets and other publications that can be tailored to address local issues.
- Provide assistance in developing strategies and sources for project funding.
- Provide assistance with the development and execution of operation and maintenance agreements.

The NWC conducts a variety of workshops and training sessions on subjects such as operation and maintenance, securing funding for O&M, rehabilitation, and other watershed topics. The NWC also sponsors a biennial National Watershed Conference.

- Provide assistance in the development and format for emergency action plans for high hazard dams.
- Provide information and assistance with contracting issues.
- Serve as a resource for conflict management and resolution guidance related to watershed project issues.

The NWC does not provide legal advice or opinion. The type and degree of assistance provided by NWC will vary based on specifics and location. Consultation requiring on site visits, travel, extensive research or a significant investment of staff time may require a for fee/cost arrangement. Check our website for upcoming conferences, workshops, new publications and other watershed information.
